

CALL FOR PAPERS AI ETHICS WITH ARISTOTLE

Oxford University's Institute for Ethics in AI, in collaboration with Stanford University, Greece's National Center for Scientific Research "Demokritos", and the World Human Forum will hold a one-day conference on the ethics of Artificial Intelligence (AI), 'The Lyceum Project', in Athens on June 20th, 2024 with the theme of 'AI Ethics with Aristotle'. The venue for the event will be the Athens Conservatory which is adjacent to the ancient site of Aristotle's school, the Lyceum.

Details for Applicants

This call for papers invites scholars working in AI ethics, who are either currently enrolled as PhD students or within ten years of the award of their PhD, to submit a 500 word precis of the 15 minute presentation they propose to give at the conference. The presentation should engage with Aristotelian ideas as they bear on the pressing ethical or political questions thrown up by AI. Those selected to present at the conference will have economy airfare and two nights' accommodation in Athens covered by the Lyceum Project.
